

Community Health Promotion MPH

The Community Health Promotion (CHP) MPH program trains students to work with populations to improve health. The curriculum emphasizes the importance of using research and social science to assess population behavioral health patterns and psychosocial risk factors: students learn to design community-wide prevention and intervention programs, how to influence health policies, and evaluate outcomes of behavioral health change. Students must complete a minimum of 48 credits. To complete program requirements, students will choose electives, in consultation with their advising team, which may include credits towards a minor.
