WHAT IS A MASTER OF HEALTHCARE ADMINISTRATION (MHA)?

An MHA degree prepares you to lead in the business of healthcare. You'll learn to manage healthcare systems, improve patient experiences, and drive innovation across hospitals, clinics, and health organizations.

At the University of Minnesota School of Public Health (SPH), our top-ranked MHA program blends business management with a deep understanding of healthcare delivery. You'll graduate ready to make a real impact — ready to lead in health systems, consulting firms, tech companies, or startups.

Choose Your Path: MHA Programs at SPH

Residential MHA: Ideal for early-career students seeking in-person, cohort-based learning.

Executive MHA: Designed for working professionals, this program can be completed in less than two years.

"I genuinely appreciate and love my cohort. Each one of us contributes valuable perspectives, and I take great pride in being alongside them. They all exhibit exceptional intelligence and are destined to become remarkable leaders in healthcare."

Krysta Hill, MHA '25

YOU'RE READY TO MAKE A DIFFERENECE -

and we're ready to help you every step of the way.

I want to lead with purpose.

Our MHA program emphasizes ethical leadership and a commitment to health equity, preparing you to make decisions that benefit all communities.

I want a supportive community.

With small class sizes and a collaborative cohort model, you'll build lasting, personal connections with peers and faculty who are invested in your success.

I want to live in or be connected to a healthcare hub.

Minneapolis—Saint Paul provides access to leading healthcare organizations, innovative startups, and a vibrant community committed to public health.

I want real-world experience.

Residential students gain hands-on learning through internships, immersive classes, and mentor relationships. Executive students can apply new skills and knowledge directly on the job—advancing their careers as they learn.

At UMN SPH, you'll find a program that aligns with your ambition and values.
